

Coby Press

Stories that endure.

Coby Press is an independent literary publisher operating across three categories: literary fiction with structural ambition, narrative and operating nonfiction grounded in lived experience, and children's nonfiction that respects its audience. The house publishes a deliberately narrow list and is shaped by a single editorial standard: a book either endures or it does not, and the work of an editor is to know the difference before the printer does.

CURRENT LIST

Zero Margin Trilogy / By Daniel Strade

Literary Fiction / Espionage

Zero Margin / The Barista / Black Doctrine. Three novels following long-running operatives, civilian-cover networks, and the families who carry the consequences. Compared to le Carré, Joseph Kanon, and Mick Herron.

Zero to $100M / By Jacob Schlesinger

Business / Operating

A working playbook for founders, executives, and private equity operators scaling companies past the inflection where instinct stops being enough. Built from twenty-eight years of CEO, COO, and managing director work.

How Things Get Built / A children's nonfiction series

Children's Nonfiction / Ages 7 to 10

Thirty volumes that show how the physical world is actually made. Roads, bridges, modular homes, ships, tunnels, water systems, power grids. Written by an author with thirty years of construction and manufacturing experience.

EDITORIAL POSITION

A book either earns its readers or it does not. Marketing can introduce a title. It cannot make a book endure. That is the work of the writing, and the work of the editor who refuses to let a manuscript leave before it is ready.

SUBMISSIONS

Coby Press is open to a limited number of submissions across all three categories. Detailed guidelines are published at cobypress.com. Submissions may be sent to submissions@cobypress.com.
